Why Men Smoke.

A number of literary men smoke simply to make an income. They have learned that with a pipe in their mouths thoughts not only come more readily, but in better order, and that, while it is often difficult to get the proper word if they are not smoking, it runs to the point of the pen the moment they, "light up." Psychologically this is the most on residing and fling the petition duly verified, of decorpe P. Scott, administrator of said estate, praying for reasons therein set forth, that he may be authorized, suppowered and licensed to seil certain ladies' seminaries. Smoking is a great safeguard against infectious diseases. It is only by reading up the subject scientifically in medical treatises that one thoroughly gots to understand the thousand risks of this kind that we run every day. In the country during the summer months, when men are on their holidays, they look forward to having a temporary respite from smoking. Then it does not so much imatter how the temporament is; living so much in the temperament is; living so much in the open air, the smoking of other persons has little effect on them, and there is less danger of infection. it is to keep off the flies that men smoke at the seaside and on the hills. Their own weather-beaten countenances can stand the flies; but these little demons would not only spoil the summer for susceptible wives and sisters and children, but would disfigure them as well. That is what a man can not endure. You may have seen picnics on the river or among the fields, with all the men smoking and the ladies standing quite near them. With many men smoking is merely an excuse for staying at home. A man looks foolish of an evening doing nothing, yet he is too tired to do much. A cigar supplies the amount of labor he requires, and he does not mind the trouble of smoking it so long as it enables him to stay at home without loss of dignity and look admiringly, and yet undemonstratively, at his wife. Should a man with a small income be an epicure, or naturally of an irascible temper, it will add greatly to the happiness of his home if he compels himself to smoke. And at present, when times are so hard as to affect everyone more or less, a cigar is a cheap and excellent substitute for expensive amusement. -St. James's Gazette.
